

ALOMA BARDI

Biography and Select List of Publications 1992-2018

Aloma Bardi (born in Certaldo, near Florence, June 10, 1954) is an Italian-born U.S. music historian, musicologist, and translator. She is an American-music specialist, and also a scholar of opera theaters.

In Italy, she worked for many years with the Teatro Comunale di Firenze. As an author and translator, she has worked with Italian publishers, theaters, periodicals, cultural institutions and the Italian and Swiss radio, and is active on the international lecture and conference circuit. Among her accomplishments, she has podcasted American art music events on the Internet since 2005, which in those years was an innovation.

Aloma Bardi is the founding director of ICAMus, The International Center for American Music, a Non-Profit Organization affiliated with the University of Florence, Department of Music and Performing Arts, and an Affiliate Member of SAM, Society for American Music. ICAMus is led by an international Board of Directors and an Advisory Board of specialists in the field. The Center is committed to the study, performance and teaching of American music.

ICAMus has an experience of numerous productions over the years. Among the concerts, events devoted to Charles E. Ives, and to American Art Songs. Other activities include conferences, seminars, radio programs, publications. Aloma Bardi is responsible for all the projects of the Center and writes most of program notes for the ICAMus concerts. She hosts series of radio programs on American music, where ICAMus live recordings are broadcast.

From 2006 to 2011, Aloma Bardi taught “History of Music in the United States of America” at the University of Florence, the first and only academic course ever taught of this subject at a European university. In those years, her academic research and teaching were mainly focused on Early American Music. Her 2008 Florence lectures on 19th century American music had a large resonance on the national press. Rare Pre-Civil War music was performed in class during her courses, in collaboration with various schools of music and music conservatories.

Under her supervision, theses and dissertations were completed at the University of Florence, to promote knowledge and appreciation of America’s musical life before the XX century, a still largely unexplored field. Aloma Bardi works as a consultant for M.A. Theses and Doctoral dissertations in American music on an international level.

She was an associate of the Florence Opera Theater (Teatro Comunale di Firenze) and other opera theaters in Italy from 1983 to 2008. She is the author of Catalogo delle manifestazioni 1928-1997, 2 vols. of Chronology and Index and a CD-ROM, Aloma Bardi, Mauro Conti, eds., on a research project by Aloma Bardi, editorial project by Prescott Studio, data-base by Mauro Conti, printed by Casa Editrice Le Lettere (1998). This Catalog of Events of the Florence Opera Theater (founded in 1928) has been an innovative project in the field. It has been the first theater catalog containing a complete index, comprising the 2nd volume. The Catalog has proven a valuable research tool internationally.

The second edition of the Catalogo delle manifestazioni (Aloma Bardi, Luca Berni, Mauro Conti, eds.) was published in May 2008. It includes a data-base covering all the Theater productions (1928-2007) and a first volume of updates (1997-2007). The CD-ROM archive consists of 7,495 records, and 97,029 names and titles. This second edition of the Catalog is much more than an update. It is a complete revision based on extensive research, and includes new entries, such as information on premières.

As a translator, Aloma Bardi has worked on books, articles, opera and musical comedy librettos, and plays. She is an associate of Prescott Studio, a society created in Florence in 1996 to provide surtitles for the theater and the performing arts. Prescott has been mainly devoted to text editing and the technical production of surtitles for foreign language theater, and since 2000 adding opera repertoire in Italian. For Prescott, Aloma Bardi has translated numerous librettos and plays, and in recent years she has worked on bilingual titling for the new technologies (smartphones and tablets).

She has a wide experience of scholarly translations. As groundwork for her Italian translation of the literary and philosophical writings of Charles Ives, she is the author of the first critical edition of such writings, studying Charles Ives's manuscripts at the Ives Archives of the Yale Music Library. This research has enabled her to prepare an emended and still unpublished text.

Aloma Bardi is also the translator of the works of her husband, professor Gabriele Boccaccini (University of Michigan), a scholar of Judaism and Christian Origins, into Italian. Two volumes have been published so far.

She contributed to the scholarly translation in the international version of LesMu, Lexicon of Italian music literature 1490-1950, a data-base containing around 22,500 lexicographical records, making a total of over 3,600,000 words. The Italian edition was published on CD-Rom in 2008 by Franco Cesati, Firenze.

Aloma Bardi is the author and editor of the new ICAMus Web site, www.icamus.org, inaugurated in the summer 2012 and constantly expanding.

She has served as Vice_President of the Non-Profit Organization "I Fiori Musicali", and was on the Board of Vocal Images and Vox Mentor, 2002-2015.

She has recently written a book on musical adaptations of S. An-Ski's play Der Dibuk (1914), mainly focusing on American music: Esotismi musicali del Dibbuk. Ispirazioni da un soggetto del folklore ebraico [Musical Exoticisms of the Dybbuk. Inspirations from a theme of Jewish folklore], published by The University of Naples, Center for Jewish Studies, March 2014.

As a result of her continued extensive research for ICAMus on rare, unpublished music manuscripts and archives of American composers, in particular at the Library of Congress Music Division and Yale University, she has lectured in prestigious venues, such as the Coolidge Auditorium of the Library of Congress, the Embassy of Italy in Washington, DC, the University of Florence, the École Normale Supérieure de Paris, and Sapienza Università di Roma.

Since 2013, Aloma Bardi has been a constituent member of the National Artistic Council of the American Classical Music Hall of Fame.
